

Small Ruminants: To Cull or Not to Cull?

Tuesday, April 16, 2024 · 7:30–8:30 pm · FREE
Space is limited to 20 participants.
Join us on zoom!

Culling is the practice of selling off animals that you no longer desire to or are no longer able to keep. There are several reasons to cull ewes or nannies; however, economics trumps most of them. If you have sheep or goats as a hobby, visual appeal may be more important to you. Both economics and aesthetics can play a part in your decision to sell small ruminants. This session will focus on:

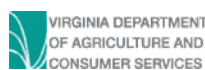

- Reasons to cull
- Culling criteria
- Marketing of culled animals
- The importance of recordkeeping

The wrap-up will include a Q&A with Cooperative Extension, small ruminant professionals, and skilled producers.

Register at ext.vsu.edu/calendar

For more information, contact Mandy Fletcher at 804-892-0108 or afletcher@vsu.edu.

Visit ext.vsu.edu for information on this and other upcoming events.

VSU COLLEGE OF AGRICULTURE
@VSU_AG

If you are a person with a disability and desire any assistive devices, services or other accommodations to participate in this activity, please call 804-524-3292 / TDD 800-828-1120 during business hours of 8 am and 5 pm to discuss accommodations five days prior to the event.

Virginia Cooperative Extension is a partnership of Virginia Tech, Virginia State University, the U.S. Department of Agriculture, and local governments. Its programs and employment are open to all, regardless of age, color, disability, gender, gender identity, gender expression, national origin, political affiliation, race, religion, sexual orientation, genetic information, military status, or any other basis protected by law.